

EAL utilizes both in-class (inclusion) and out-of-class support (extraction). In-class support allows the student to stay in their class and being provided support during lessons. EAL students learn in a small group or on a one-on-one lesson, and even one-on-one reading with the support, if needed. Students study concepts in English like sentence constructions, punctuations and vocabularies. EAL also incorporate more fun in learning through indoor games, competition and singing and dancing. Lessons usually start with a question, and then a discussion. This is to motivate the students to communicate more and build confidence.
